Okay I went through Homy's login microservice code and will be able to customize it in whatever way you prefer.

10:18 Currently, I have the request mapping, `/api/users/register` that accepts the request body as follows,

    "username": "andrewtran@gmail.com",
    "firstName": "Andrew",
    "lastName": "Tran",
    "password": "12345678",
    "confirmPassword": "12345678"
}

which sends the User back in JSON.

And the mapping, `/api/users/login` that accepts the body,

```
    "username": "andrewtran@gmail.com",
    "password": "12345678"
}

which in response sends a authentication status and the JWT token.

So the frontend can be integrated now I believe.

Alright set up the role configurations for spring security, I have not pushed it yet, but I need a few things changed as of now.

Shihab Sami 12:35 AM
Firstly, password confirmation and password length should be checked in the front end, reckon it's overkill to do such checks all the way over here.

Second, when a request is sent to the register endpoint, I require two additional fields, the `roles` is a string of comma separated roles, (all with the prefix `ROLE_` required by spring security), and based on which I'll configure what endpoints the user has access to.

The `enabled` is a boolean kept for if and when we do "ban/unban users", we can do it using that (just thinking ahead).

And lastly what you might already know, whenever a request is sent to a secured endpoint, I need the token that's of the form `Bearer {JWT}` to be able to verify the user and user's roles.

I can add your JUnit tests to Github Actions if you wish @Shihab Sami https://github.com/SEPT-2021/bookeroo-app/pull/4/commits/5f4655eb02083c5d7bf16d3ed9d5bf6cf53e8a9a (edited) nicee, I'll give this a look

Taking Ryan's advise, I renamed the `microservice-book` branch to `sp29-feature-books` so in case anyone's remote went missing, that's what happened. I reckon it's better in the long run to have smaller branches that we can each work on. Sorry for the hassle.

As discussed in yesterday's meeting, I've updated the process of adding books based on what you guys recommended.
This is books being added alongside a cover image file.

👍 1

And this is using a cover image url.

The returned body has the public url to access the object.

Let me know if you guys want additional metadata included in the stored image.
