SP-28 As a logged in user, I want to cancel my order within 2 hours since I placed it, so that I can return the book if I do not enjoy it.

SP-29 As a logged in user, I want to be able to view the book cover and details, so that I can confirm the book's contents before I buy it.

SP-30 As an admin, I want to download book transactions/user transactions reports on CSV format, so that I can analyse the website's performance.

The screenshot shows a web-based dashboard titled "Book Transactions". The interface includes a header with a logo, search bar, and navigation buttons. Below the header, there are four main data visualization components:

- Chart Gradient Daily Sells: A line chart showing daily sales volume over time, with a peak value of 128.
- Vertical Bars Location: A bar chart showing the number of downloads by location, with categories like UNITED STATES, RUSSIA, UKRAINE, and INDIA, and a total value of 12,5%.
- Fill Chart Downloaded: A donut chart showing the percentage of downloads, with a value of 12,5%.
- Pie Chart Popularity: A pie chart showing popularity distribution across four categories: Color1, Color2, Color3, and Color4.

Annotations on the left side of the dashboard include:

- "Statistics based on transaction history." pointing to the line chart.
- "Newsletter sign-up." pointing to a "Email address" input field at the bottom left.

Annotations on the right side of the dashboard include:

- "Links to Shopping Cart, Your Account, Contact Us, etc." pointing to the top navigation area.
- "Allows saving the statistics in CSV format." pointing to a "Save As CSV" button.
- "Social media links." pointing to a row of small social media icons at the bottom right.
